Classical Crossover Music Education Assembly

Assembly Presentation - a 40 minute all school assembly style presentation

Aaron's Mission: To provide young students with the introductory tools to engage in classical music, and to teach them how it can be integrated into contemporary, pop, and world music with a modern approach.

The Classical Crossover Music Education Program is a 40-minute assembly-style program where classically-trained violinist Aaron Meyer demonstrates the connections and differences between Classical Music and his own original, modern music, using a traditional violin and a modern electric violin with digital studio effects. Meyer integrates music history into the presentation, and introduces the physical science properties that govern the acoustic violin and sound. A soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra at the age of 11 and a recent soloist with the Bangkok Symphony Orchestra, Meyer's original music falls into the new "Classical Crossover" genre (now a recognized GRAMMY Award category). This program is interactive, educational, fun, and can help introduce Classical music to a new and young audience. Aaron has been conducting the following music education programs in schools around the United States and in International locations for over 10 years. www.aaronmeyer.com

"My students can't stop talking about you. They practically attacked me when I walked in the door this morning!! They can't stop talking about the violin cake and the shape of your electric violin. They absolutely loved your visit!! Your musicianship is superb, and your presentation is paced just right for elementary without talking over the little ones' heads or talking down to the older ones. Nice work on the math and science promotion, too!" - Amber Schumacher, Lenox/Groner Music Specialist, Portland, Oregon
